WHY YOU SHOULD SKIP IBIZA AND HONEYMOON IN MALLORCA INSTEAD

When it comes to the Spanish Balearic Islands, an archipelago in the Mediterranean just east of mainland Spain, Ibiza steals the spotlight every time. But just a few hours away by ferry lies the largest island in the chain, Mallorca, which blends the best of the Mediterranean's seaside charm with Spain's vibrant nightlife. Spend your days road tripping and basking on one of over 200 beaches as beautiful as you'd find on Ibiza—sans a crowd of backpackers—pausing to sleep in luxe boutique hotels. Where to start? With a glass of sparkling Cava, of course.

WHERE TO SLEEP

Check into the boutique Hotel Sant Francesc, which sits in the heart of one of Palma de Mallorca's most historic squares. The former 19th-century manor is surrounded by narrow alleyways spilling on to charming squares where you'll come across live music both day and night. Toast to the start of your new union (and honeymoon) with cocktails on the hotel's very own rooftop terrace, which overlooks a 13th-century sandstone basilica—the first of many Instagrammable shots. The garden terrace at Quadrat restaurant is just as dreamy, but it's worth stepping out and strolling through the capital city's medieval streets at dusk.
